Chapter 353: The Creation of the Seven Archangels

Sung Jin-Woo, in his unparalleled evolution, found himself at the summit of divine creation. With power that could shape and reshape entire realms, he sought to create beings who would serve his will with utmost devotion, beings whose very existence would be a testament to his supreme authority. Thus, from the core of his divinity, he created the Seven Archangels.

Each archangel was a being of unimaginable power, tasked with roles that would serve Sung Jin-Woo's divine purpose and oversee the intricate balance of the realms. They were beings of immense stature, their power reflecting Sung Jin-Woo’s influence over existence itself. With their creation, his domain would grow even grander, and his legacy would be inscribed in the fabric of the multiverse.

The Seven Archangels

1. Gabriel: The Archangel of the Messenger and Captain of Battle Angels

Gabriel, the first archangel Sung Jin-Woo created, was the captain of the Battle Angels and the Messenger. His role was to carry out Sung Jin-Woo's divine will across the realms, delivering messages that would resonate through the very core of existence. His presence commanded armies and struck fear into the hearts of those who dared defy Sung Jin-Woo.

Gabriel was a figure of war, strength, and loyalty. With 600 wings, each representing his divine versatility, Gabriel stood as the cornerstone of Sung Jin-Woo's divine army. His wings radiated a blinding light that could burn through darkness itself. As the captain of battle angels, Gabriel led legions in celestial warfare, a being of might whose very breath inspired devotion in his subordinates. His essence intertwined with the celestial armies he commanded, ensuring that no enemy stood a chance against the might of the True Absolute One.

2. Michael: The Archangel of Blessings

Michael was tasked with the sacred duty of bestowing blessings upon Sung Jin-Woo’s followers, worshippers, and priests. He was a figure of light and compassion, the embodiment of divine generosity. Those who walked under his divine guidance were showered with the blessings of immortality, strength, and unparalleled resilience. Michael’s wings carried the very essence of peace, health, and prosperity, extending the divine gifts that only Sung Jin-Woo could bestow.

His presence in the True Absolute One Domain was a constant reminder of the divine protection Sung Jin-Woo provided to his followers. Michael’s role was crucial—his blessings sustained the loyalty of the faithful and ensured the continued strength of the Divine Triad's followers. His wings, though fewer than the others, held the purest of divine energies, constantly radiating warmth and protection over those under his care.

3. Israfel: The Archangel of the Trumpet

Israfel was tasked with a singular, monumental responsibility: to blow the trumpet that could obliterate all those who dared oppose Sung Jin-Woo. This archangel’s role was not one of regular duty but one of finality. When the call for retribution came, Israfel would sound the trumpet of judgment, and all who stood against Sung Jin-Woo would be swept away in the blink of an eye.

With 1200 wings, Israfel's power was immense, each wing representing a facet of divine wrath. His wings were dark, infused with the power to cleanse and destroy in one breath. His very existence was a living threat to those who dared challenge the supremacy of the True Absolute One. His trumpet, when blown, was not just a sound—it was a wave of annihilation, capable of erasing entire legacies from existence.

4. The Four Bearers of The Throne: The Guardians of Sung Jin-Woo’s Divine Seat

The Four Bearers of The Throne were created to bear the weight of Sung Jin-Woo’s divine throne, a symbol of his absolute dominion over all things. They were tasked with standing guard at every corner of the throne, ensuring that no one could challenge Sung Jin-Woo’s sovereignty.

Each of the Four Bearers possessed 2400 wings, making them the most powerful of the archangels. Their wings were magnificent, each bearing the essence of pure divine authority. Together, they formed an impenetrable barrier around the throne, a wall of divinity that no force could ever hope to breach.

The Four Bearers of The Throne were not just protectors; they were symbols of Sung Jin-Woo's ultimate control over reality. With their combined power, they ensured that no challenger, no force, no being could ever hope to usurp the throne or challenge his reign.

The Unfathomable Power of the Seven Archangels

With the creation of these seven beings, Sung Jin-Woo’s dominion over the True Absolute One Domain reached even greater heights. Gabriel, Michael, Israfel, and the Four Bearers were not just servants—they were extensions of his will, living embodiments of his divine purpose.

Each archangel represented a facet of Sung Jin-Woo’s supremacy:

Gabriel was war and leadership.

Michael was peace, prosperity, and blessings.

Israfel was judgment and annihilation.

The Four Bearers were the eternal guardians of his throne, standing as unmovable pillars of divine power.

Together, they formed a celestial hierarchy that could not be challenged, ensuring that Sung Jin-Woo’s reign over the multiverse would remain unchallenged for eternity.

The True Absolute One Domain, once a vast space of divine potential, had now become a kingdom of unimaginable might, with Sung Jin-Woo at its heart and his archangels serving as the pillars upon which his reign was built.
